New York City

Angelica Richie's unique take on Leadership, Teams, and Peak performance has benefited a wide range of clients ranging from the medical industry to entertainment, professional sports to private equity, prisons to ed-tech.

Her real-life stories are powerful illustrations of organizational health and its impact. Nearly every day in Manhattan she experiences "Smart" organizations that are not "Healthy", as well as those truly committed to being both.

Her consulting and speaking are transformative for all - but definitely hit home with women and "under 40 employees". Angelica is known for helping organizations understand and deal gracefully with contemporary issues facing organizations and teams.

Currently, she works regularly with CEOs and executive teams to quickly and effectively apply the concepts captured in Patrick

Lencioni's books. Her mastery of the Myers-Briggs instrument and the DiSC assessment is consistently credited for changing team and individual leadership trajectories.

Angelica has extensive first-hand experience with high performing teams as a professional actor, having performed throughout the US in four national tours of Broadway shows.

Whether in front of an audience of 5,000 at the Fox Theater in Atlanta or Detroit, or a corporate audience at Global 200 giant, Unilever, or at powerhouse private equity firm H.I.G, Angelica Richie is a consistently high performer in her own right!

Angelica lives in Manhattan. She is a graduate of UCLA.
