

Team Assessment Report

BASED ON THE MODEL IN THE BEST-SELLING
BOOK, *THE FIVE DYSFUNCTIONS OF A TEAM

A Sample Team from A Sample Company | 01-01-2020

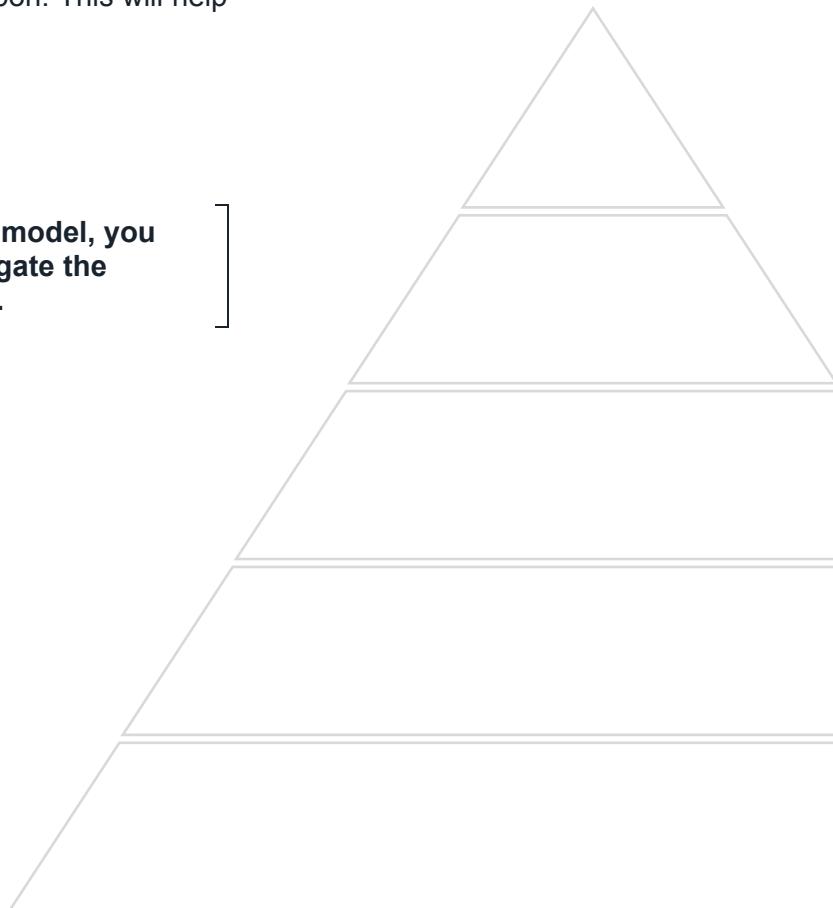

Introduction

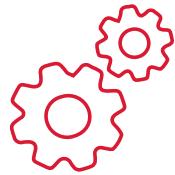

The primary purpose of this report is to provide your team with a sense of its strengths and areas for improvement. While the Assessment itself is certainly quantitative and data-driven, its most important aspect is the qualitative perspective it provides for your team and the discussion that it provokes around specific issues.

If you have not yet read the book, The Five Dysfunctions of a Team, the following pages are included to give you a summary of the teamwork model that this Assessment is based upon. This will help you interpret your team's results.

If you are familiar with the dysfunctions model, you can skip ahead to page 5, and investigate the interpretations of your scores.

The Model

Like it or not, all teams are potentially dysfunctional. This is inevitable because they are made up of fallible, imperfect human beings. From the basketball court to the executive suite, politics and confusion are more the rule than the exception.

But the power of teamwork is great. The founder of a billion dollar company best expressed that power when he once said, "If you could get all the people in an organization rowing in the same direction, you could dominate any industry, in any market, against any competition, at any time."

Whenever a group of leaders hears this adage, they immediately nod their heads, but in a desperate sort of way. They seem to grasp the truth of it while simultaneously surrendering to the impossibility of actually making it happen.

Fortunately, the causes of dysfunction are both identifiable and curable. However, they don't die easily. Making a team functional and cohesive requires extraordinary levels of courage and discipline.

The following section provides an overview of the five behavioral challenges all teams must continuously work to avoid.

Fortunately,

Making a team

cohesive requires

The Five Dysfunctions

01

DYSFUNCTION #1:

ABSENCE OF TRUST

This occurs when team members are reluctant to be vulnerable with one another, and are thus unwilling to admit their mistakes, acknowledge their weaknesses or ask for help. Without a certain comfort level among team members, a foundation of trust is impossible.

02

DYSFUNCTION #2:

FEAR OF CONFLICT

Trust is critical because without it, teams are unlikely to engage in unfiltered, passionate debate about key issues. This creates two problems. First, stifling conflict actually increases the likelihood of destructive, back channel sniping. Second, it leads to sub-optimal decision-making because the team is not benefiting from the true ideas and perspectives of its members.

03

DYSFUNCTION #3:

LACK OF COMMITMENT

Without conflict, it is extremely difficult for team members to truly commit to decisions because they don't feel that they are part of the decision. This often creates an environment of ambiguity and confusion in an organization, leading to frustration among employees, especially top performers.

04

DYSFUNCTION #4:

AVOIDANCE OF ACCOUNTABILITY

When teams don't commit to a clear plan of action, peer-to-peer accountability suffers greatly. Even the most focused and driven individuals will hesitate to call their peers on counterproductive actions and behaviors if they believe those actions and behaviors were never agreed upon in the first place.

05

DYSFUNCTION #5:

INATTENTION TO RESULTS

When team members are not holding one another accountable, they increase the likelihood that individual ego and recognition will become more important than collective team results. When this occurs, the business suffers and the team starts to unravel.

The Rewards

Striving to create a functional, cohesive team is one of the few remaining competitive advantages available to any organization looking for a powerful point of differentiation.

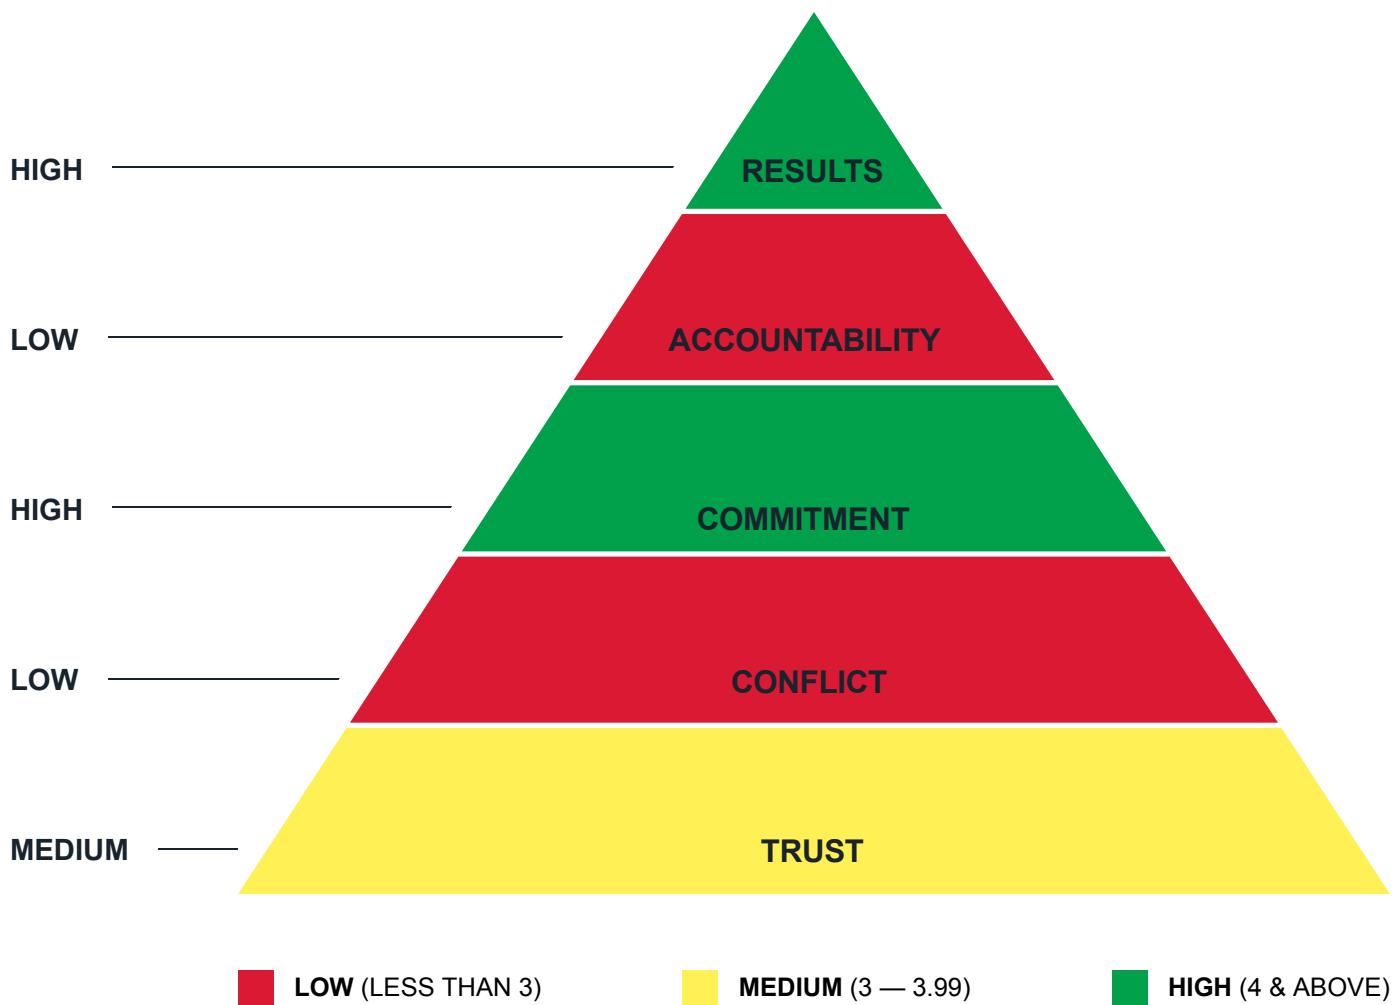

Functional teams get more accomplished in less time than other teams because they avoid wasting time on the wrong issues and revisiting the same topics again and again. They also make higher quality decisions and stick to those decisions by eliminating politics and confusion among themselves and the people they lead. Finally, functional teams keep their best employees longer because “A” players rarely leave organizations where they are part of, or being led by, a cohesive team.

Functional teams get more accomplished in less time than other teams because they avoid wasting time on the wrong issues and revisiting the same topics again and again.

Team Culture Questions

The Five Dysfunctions of a Team model is the foundation for building cohesive and effective teams. However, the expression of these behaviors can vary from team to team depending on the team's unique culture. This section is intended to help tee up conversations to help your team overcome the five dysfunctions.

BUILDING TRUST

WHAT IS NEEDED TO BUILD TRUST?

As part of the assessment, you and your team members were asked to identify specific areas to build more trust. The number of team members who selected each response appears below. You and your team members had the option to select all that apply.

There would be more trust on our team if people:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 5 | Readily apologized |
| 5 | Shared professional failures and successes |
| 4 | Spent more time together |
| 4 | Understood each other's working styles |
| 4 | Were more forthright with information |
| 4 | Reduced the amount of gossiping |
| 4 | Got to know each other on a personal level |
| 3 | Admitted their mistakes |
| 2 | Let go of grudges |
| 0 | Would give credit where credit is due |

Team Culture Questions

MASTERING CONFLICT

WHAT IS ACCEPTABLE BEHAVIOR DURING CONFLICT?

As part of the assessment, you and your team members were asked whether certain behaviors or actions are acceptable while engaging in conflict and how many of you display them at work.

RESPONSE TO CONFLICT:	UNACCEPTABLE	TOLERABLE	PERFECTLY ACCEPTABLE	# OF TEAM MEMBERS WHO ADMIT THEY DO THIS AT WORK
Avoiding someone when you're angry	5	2	1	7
Excluding other team members from difficult conversations	5	0	3	3
Being outwardly emotional	4	4	0	5
Raising your voice when you get passionate	3	3	2	4
Using strong language when you're upset	2	2	4	5
Going beyond the meeting end time to resolve an issue	1	4	3	6
Expressing anger through indirect actions rather than voicing it directly	1	1	6	4

Team Culture Questions

ACHIEVING COMMITMENT

WHAT PREVENTS TEAM MEMBERS FROM COMMITTING TO DECISIONS?

As part of the assessment, you and your team members had an opportunity to identify reasons that could be contributing to the lack of commitment. The number of team members who selected each option appears next to the corresponding bar. You and your team members had the option to select all that apply.

I sometimes don't buy-in to the team's decisions because:

We are not clear about priorities

I don't trust my team to follow through

I don't have all the information

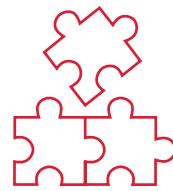

There is not enough time during meetings

Decisions are counter to my personal goals

Team Culture Questions

EMBRACING ACCOUNTABILITY

WHAT WOULD IMPROVE YOUR TEAM'S ABILITY TO HOLD ONE ANOTHER ACCOUNTABLE?

As part of the assessment, you and your team members had an opportunity to identify areas where it would be possible to hold one another accountable more. The number of team members who selected each response appears below. You and your team members had the option to select all that apply.

Our ability to hold one another accountable could improve if we challenged one another to:

- | | |
|---|--|
| 5 | Address missed deadlines immediately |
| 4 | Have clearer priorities and goals |
| 4 | Have more productive meetings |
| 4 | Give one another feedback |
| 3 | Spend more time together |
| 3 | Publicly share goals |
| 3 | Be more direct |
| 3 | Follow through on personal commitments |
| 3 | Call one another on unproductive behaviors |
| 2 | Review progress against goals during team meetings |

Team Culture Questions

FOCUSING ON RESULTS

WHAT IS NEEDED TO FOCUS ON RESULTS?

As part of the assessment, you and your team members had an opportunity to identify what you believe might be a distraction from achieving results. The number of team members who selected each option appears next to the corresponding bar. You and your team members had the option to select all that apply.

Some distractions that keep us from focusing on results are:

Vague or shifting goals

More emphasis on personal goals than team goals

Lack of shared rewards

Lack of drive and urgency

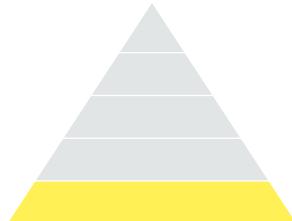

Insufficient/ineffective processes and structure

Emphasis on career status or progression

Tips & Exercises

PRACTICAL GUIDELINES
FOR OVERCOMING
THE FIVE DYSFUNCTIONS

Overcoming the Absence of Trust (1 of 2)

Trust lies at the heart of a functioning, cohesive team. It is the foundation, and without it, real teamwork cannot occur. Team trust comes from the vulnerability of members' sharing their weaknesses, skill deficiencies, interpersonal shortcomings, mistakes, requests for help, etc. Such trust enables team members to focus on the job at hand rather than on protecting themselves, their turf, or their individual jobs.

TIPS & EXERCISES

Personal Histories Exercise

Download a PDF

One of the simplest and most effective ways to build vulnerability on a team is to use the Personal Histories Exercise. This exercise consists of three simple questions, takes no more than 25 minutes and without fail, team members walk away with a deeper knowledge of one another's stories. This is a great place to start building vulnerability and trust on the team.

Personality Instrument

All team members are wired differently. Personality instruments (i.e., Myers-Briggs, DiSC or Social Styles) help team members understand one another's different preferences, skills and attitudes, and identify collective strengths and potential blind spots of the team. This will help team members avoid making unproductive judgments about one another and instead leverage the diverse approaches and perspectives of the team.

Fundamental Attribution Error

Watch the Video

The fundamental attribution error occurs when human beings falsely attribute the negative behaviors of others to their character (an internal attribution), while they attribute their own negative behaviors to their environment (an external attribution). View the video on the Fundamental Attribution Error and discuss how using a personality instrument can help team members avoid making bad judgments about one another's character and intentions.

TIPS & EXERCISES

⊕ Self-ranking Exercise

In Pat's related book The Ideal Team Player, he looks at the individual team member and identifies three essential virtues of real team players. When individuals on a team are humble, hungry, and smart, it makes overcoming the five dysfunctions of a team much more attainable. This self-ranking exercise is a great way for team members to assess themselves against the three virtues and build trust by sharing with the team.

⊕ An Important Note for Virtual Teams...

Virtual teams need to commit to spending face-to-face time together, as much and as often as possible, and to use that time wisely. That means working hard to build vulnerability-based trust with one another. It's hard enough for people who work in the same office every day and who look at each other in the face during meetings to do this well. Teams who don't have that luxury are going to have to be much more intentional about getting to know one another during their virtual meetings and when they are together.

Overcoming the Fear of Conflict (1 of 2)

Once trust is established, conflict on a team becomes nothing but the pursuit of the best idea. True conflict is about the productive exchange of diverse ideas and opinions in a focused and unfiltered way. Without conflict, decision-making suffers and relationships among team members stagnate. Additionally, if healthy conflict around ideas is not a regular part of team meetings and discussion it generally degenerates to mean-spirited, back-channel comments behind closed doors.

TIPS & EXERCISES

⊕ Real-time Permission

Watch the Video

For most teams, conflict can feel foreign and uncomfortable. Real-time permission is when the leader interrupts team members who are in the midst of an uncustomary debate, to remind them that what they are doing is okay. It is the role of the leader to provide real-time permission when healthy conflict is occurring, encouraging the team to continue to passionately debate in pursuit of the best answer.

⊕ Mine for Conflict

If team members remain hesitant to engage in conflict or avoid sharing dissenting opinions, it is the leader's job to provoke team conflict. We call this "mining for conflict." It is important that a team member, most often the leader, is responsible for drawing out any potential unresolved issues and forcing the team to confront them.

⊕ Personality Instrument

Many personality instruments include an analysis of how each style or type deals with conflict. Explore and discuss how different team members naturally engage in conflict.

Overcoming the Fear of Conflict (2 of 2)

TIPS & EXERCISES

Conflict Norms

Establish rules of engagement for dealing with conflict within the team (e.g., behaviors, displays of emotion, language, process). Having clear standards of behavior allows a team to focus on the discussion of issues without having to slow down to think about what is and is not appropriate. Capture the team conflict norms and refer to them in meetings.

Conflict Continuum

Watch the Video

The conflict continuum is a spectrum depicting the full range of conflict, from artificial harmony (zero conflict) to aggressive and destructive politics (extreme conflict). At the middle of the continuum is the point where conflict changes from constructive and ideological to destructive and personal. View the video on the conflict continuum and discuss where the team might fall on the scale. Discuss ways artificial harmony shows up and identify how to introduce more healthy conflict into team meetings and discussions.

Overcoming the Lack of Commitment (1 of 2)

Teams that have a strong level of commitment understand that members do not need to get their way to support a decision but only need to know that their opinions have been heard and seriously considered. Teams with high levels of commitment can unite behind a decision even though there is no certainty that the decision is correct. They know that a decision is better than no decision and that it is better to make a choice, act with boldness, be wrong and change direction than it is to waffle or wait for 100% certainty.

TIPS & EXERCISES

Weigh-in to Buy-in

A team cannot achieve commitment without conflict. Team members will not actively commit to a decision if they have not had the opportunity to provide input, ask questions, and understand the rationale behind it. If people don't weigh-in, they can't buy-in. It is the job of the leader to solicit the input of each team member during meetings and discussions.

Thematic Goal

With a foundation of trust and a good dose of healthy conflict, a team needs to agree upon their most important near-term priority, a thematic goal, and how they are going to go about achieving it. Agreeing on a top priority and reviewing progress towards it during weekly meetings reinforces commitment.

Overcoming the Lack of Commitment (2 of 2)

TIPS & EXERCISES

⊕ Cascading Communication

At the end of every meeting, a team should explicitly review the key decisions made and agree on what needs to be communicated to employees and other constituents. The use of this simple exercise, called cascading communication, demonstrates a public commitment to agreements and aligns employees throughout the organization around common objectives. Even naturally hesitant team members commit to decisions when they have communicated them to their direct reports.

⊕ Clarity and Closure

Force the team to achieve clarity and closure. Leaders of teams who commit to decisions demand that their people eliminate ambiguity and leave meetings and discussions clear about what they are agreeing to do. Do the hard work of wrestling issues to the ground. Be sure not to shy away from lively, often lengthy discussion around big strategic topics or to move on to new agenda items too early for the sake of time.

Overcoming the Avoidance of Accountability

For teams, accountability means the willingness of team members to call their peers on behaviors that might hurt the team's performance. Team members avoid accountability because of the personal discomfort that comes from calling a peer on his/her behaviors and a more general tendency to avoid difficult conversations. Holding peers accountable means that team members must "enter the danger" with one another. Of course, they can do this only if levels of trust, healthy conflict and commitment are sufficiently high.

TIPS & EXERCISES

Team Effectiveness Exercise

Download a PDF

The Team Effectiveness Exercise provides a forum for quick and effective exchange of feedback. Ask team members to identify and communicate one another's positive and negative actions/behaviors. By doing so, teams can quickly and constructively surface issues that might take months to address using a more formal, politically divisive 360-degree program.

The Lightning Round—Meetings

While a sense of accountability should pervade virtually every aspect of organizational life at a great company, the place where it must be demonstrated and addressed most clearly is meetings. Start a weekly meeting with a lightning round. A lightning round allows each team members 30 seconds to share what they are working on in the coming week. When team members keep one another informed about what they are doing, it allows peers to provide feedback and advice on whether team members are focused on the right things as well as ensure those things are moving toward completion.

The Thematic Goal—Meetings

During every weekly meeting, review progress on the team's agreed upon thematic goal. When a team ensures deviations from plans are identified quickly, they make it more likely that performance issues of team members will be highlighted and addressed. The Meeting Advantage is an online tool that can help a team measure progress on shared goals and hold one another accountable to their commitments.

Overcoming the Inattention to Results

One of the main reasons to work in teams is that they can achieve results that would be impossible for an individual working alone. An unrelenting focus on collective goals is a requirement for any team that judges itself on results. Teams that have this dysfunction suffer because individuals work to satisfy their individual status, ego or departmental needs, rather than focusing on the collective goals of the group.

TIPS & EXERCISES

Team #1

Watch the Video

Getting all members of the team to value and emphasize the collective success of the group over their own personal needs or departmental goals is essential for effective teams. Results suffer when team members put a higher priority on the activities of their own departments or divisions. Review the video and ensure each individual commits to the team goals/results as his/her top priority.

The Thematic Goal—Meetings

During every weekly meeting, a team should focus on its thematic goal. This is a way of reinforcing collective results in a public way, and team members are much more likely to follow through and less likely to let personal needs take precedence. The Meetings Advantage is an online tool that can help a team measure progress on shared goals and hold one another accountable to their commitments, which ultimately leads to team-based results.

Team-based Rewards

Ensure that team-based rewards form the basis for most compensation and recognition programs. When team members have incentives to focus on their individual performance objectives and not those of the team, it becomes easy for results to take a back seat to personal financial goals and career development.
